

Pictures from the 2014 NECHPS Annual Technical Symposium

Dr. Bill Irwin discussed the State of Vermont perspective on the closing of the Vermont Yankee Station

Chris Martel talks about patient dose tracking and software

Frazier Bronson recounts his adventures in post-Fukushima Japan, the concerns about food coming from Fukushima prefecture and how Canberra helps to assure that food products are contamination-free

Haneef Sahabdeen talks about the high power CO₂ cutting lasers that are starting to be more prevalent in scientific and non-scientific academic areas at UMass Amherst

Nasser Rashidifard passes the Presidential reins to Steve Snay. Nasser also spoke about his experiences in neutron measurement and dosimetry at power plants and interim spent fuel storage areas

Karen Farris speaks about proposed amendments to Massachusetts regulations regarding radiologic technologists